N response to my willingness to answer queries, I received a number of letters. The first opened asked "for a suit light in color and yet serviceable enough to keep away from the cleaners for some time." For the benefit of this naive inquirer I wear the above suit to illustrate a fetching black and white check that I think will answer her requirements.

The coat of this suit is semi-fitting, lined with striped taffeta, and is bound with black braid; pockets are neatly finished with tailor's points. The skirt has a six-inch fold, top edged with black braid. Covered buttons give an effective finish to the front panel. To complete a jaunty outfit, I suggest a black chip sailor hat, like one in photograph, with large black wings and cerese ribbon bows with jet ball pins.

This suit and hat were selected from the exhibit of $24.50 suits and $7.50 hats shown by the Bon Marche, at 314 and 316 Seventh Street Northwest.

Be sure to read the next little chatwatch for the photograph.
